Introduction: Forex trading means the exchange of one currency for another. Currency exchange means the buying and selling of two currencies. In order to enter the currency market, you need to pay for a margin. This means that you need to deposit money. To enter the market, you must make a margin of at least 1:100 of the value of the instrument you want to trade. The deposit margin is the amount of funds that you will need to open a position and leave in the market. The purpose of margin is to allow the broker to liquidate your positions. The broker will not be able to sell your positions if the value of the currency pair is below your margin. Therefore, the risks associated with currency trading, such as leverage or trading against the trend. Forex traders are also known as currency pairs. There are three main currency pairs in the currency market. These include the euro-usd, the pound-usd and the dollar-yen. When you buy currency, you buy a currency pair. When you sell currency, you sell a currency pair. You can trade currency pairs with leverage. The leverage is the amount of margin you use to enter a trade. The higher the leverage, the more risk you are willing to take. How to make money in Forex trading: The best way to make money in Forex trading is to use the advantage of leverage. If you use the leverage of 10 times, you will trade with a deposit margin of 1:100. You can trade all day, throughout the day and around the clock. However, there are a few restrictions that apply to currency traders. You can only trade with up to 10 positions at one time. If you want to increase your position, you must close your previous position and open a new position. You can trade up to 1.5 times of your trading capital at any time.
